EDUCATOR DIES OF BLOW STUCK BY FELLOW-WORKMAN

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA., August 29.—John R. Watkins, aged twenty-one years, of Bells Cross Roads, Louisa County, who was struck back of the right ear by a wagon standard in the hands of a fellow-workman, Andrew J. Hicks, at the plant of a local lumber company on Friday, died this afternoon. The fatal blow followed a trifling quarrel over which should have a drink of water first.

Watkins had been teaching in the high school of Louisa County for two years, and intended to enter a preparatory school here next month to prepare himself for the University of Virginia, with a view to entering the ministry. His parents, two brothers and five sisters survive. Hicks, who is only seventeen, is now in jail.
